Injured Removed from Burning Swedish Ship

THREE DEAD ON HELPLESS BOAT IN ATLANTIC

Eight Wounded Transferred To Rescue Vessel; Heavy Sea Impedes Rescuers

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 12—Lifeboats of a rescue ship today removed eight injured persons from the fire-ravaged Swedish freighter Kristina Thorden, which wallowed helplessly in the stormy North Atlantic with three of her 14 passengers dead.

The Norwegian American liner Stavangerfjord broke a radio silence this morning to report the transfer of eight wounded from the 5,900-ton Kristina Thorden, aboard which Walter Heiberg, former U. S. naval attache at Stockholm, and two Finnish students died.

The probability of a greater death toll was indicated. The Stavangerfjord radio said her staff doctor and a nurse, who had been put aboard the stricken vessel, had hopes of saving the lives of most of the seriously injured passengers.

Messages from the Stavangerfjord to the Thorden Shipping Company, owners of the 5,900-ton Kristina Thorden, said a doctor and nurse from the passenger liner had reached the stricken vessel in a rowboat after a terrific battle with gale-swept seas.

Fire which broke out aboard the Kristina Friday morning was under control, the Stavangerfjord messaged.

Details of the fatal blaze were unavailable. Flames had destroyed the Kristina's radio, and her communications with the rescue vessel were by blinker light.

The Stavangerfjord, en route from New York to Norway, reached the Kristina after picking up an S. O. S. yesterday. A turbulent sea was rolling, preventing rescue efforts, so the Stavangerfjord dumped tons of oil to create a "slick."

The staff doctor and nurse of the Stavangerfjord entered a lifeboat and made a hazardous trip across the oily water to the Kristina, which was wallowing helplessly. They carried medical equipment to treat the wounded.

First reports said five were dead and four seriously wounded aboard the Kristina. Later information listed only three dead. They were Heiberg, Joergen

NEW CHARGE IS FACED BY 'GOOD SAMARITAN', 62

MADISON, Ind., Oct. 12—Mrs. Lottie Lockman, 62, was freed on bond today after her arrest on a grand jury indictment charging her with the attempted poisoning of Mrs. Mayme McConnell, 55.

Mrs. Lockman, known as a "Good Samaritan," whose neighbors insist she "always is doing things for people," was seized at the home of a relative at nearby Wirt, Ind., yesterday.

It was her third arrest since an investigation began last August in the illness of Mrs. McConnell and the deaths of at least three elderly persons, all of whom died while under Mrs. Lockman's care.

Mrs. Lockman spent 25 minutes in the Jefferson county jail before she was brought before Circuit Judge Harry E. Nichols, who set her free on an additional $2,500 bond until "some time next week" when she will appear for arraignment. She had been at liberty since Aug. 15 under $15,000 bond.

Mrs. Lockman's attorney, Joseph Coper, said "friends" furnished the bond.

CHAUFFEUR KILLED

JOLIET, Ill., Oct. 12—Police today searched for two men who fatally beat and robbed a Negro chauffeur as he was towing their automobile to a gasoline station. Alonzo W. Porter, 63, driver for Mrs. Marie Mackay, Chicago, was killed by the pair, who hailed his car about 10 miles southwest of here last night and said they were out of gas.

U. S. May Intercede In Behalf of Archbishop

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12—The state department today awaited further details of the conviction of Yugoslav Archbishop Aloysius Stepanic amid evidence that it may intercede in his behalf.

The department expressed "concern and deep worry" over the Catholic leader's fate and made it clear that the United States intends to determine whether he received a fair trial.

Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson told a press conference yesterday that news accounts of the trial aggravated U. S. fears that religious and civil freedom is impaired under the Marshal Tito regime.

Stepanic, leader of 2,000,000 Croatian Catholics, was convicted as a collaborationist and sentenced to 16 years' imprisonment at forced labor by the Croatian supreme court.

Permitting direct quotation of his remarks, Acheson revealed that this country is interested particularly in possible violations of the United Nations charter, which seeks to guarantee civil rights throughout the world.

He said that any decision on U. S. intervention, either in a direct appeal to Yugoslavia or through the United Nations, must await a full report on the trial from Ambassador Richard C. Patterson, Jr., at Belgrade.

Acheson's remarks were thought likely to set off charges by Yugoslavia and Russia that this country is intervening unduly in the domestic affairs of another.

The acting secretary recalled that the United States has been concerned about civil liberties in Yugoslavia since recognition of the Tito government. In a "very considerable number of cases" involving trials of U. S. citizens before Yugoslav tribunals, he added this country "unhappily" has been

THIEVES MAKE TWO HAULS HERE

VFW Club Rooms Ransacked, Slot Machines Wrecked By Burglars

Substantial amount of cash was obtained by thieves in two robberies in Circleville, Friday night, but the exact total was undetermined early Saturday afternoon.

Burglars broke into and reportedly obtained considerable cash at the Veterans of Foreign Wars club rooms, 217 North Court street, and a radio, a kodak, and a woman's pocketbook containing $60 cash were stolen from the automobile of Robert Renz, Huntington, Ind., which was parked in front of the tourist home of George W. Groom at 131 West Mound street.

Although a veil of secrecy was thrown around the VFW robbery immediately after it was discovered Saturday morning, police revealed that entrance was gained by forcing a first floor window. A locked door leading to the basement bar and club rooms was then smashed.

The basement rooms were thoroughly ransacked, police said, and an undisclosed amount of cash and liquor was stolen, although a jar of pennies on a backbar was undisturbed.

Apparently wielding sledge hammers the thieves literally wrecked slot machines and removed the cash contents.

Police Chief William F. McCrady said that a fingerprint expert from the State Highway Patrol, Columbus, was to arrive in Circleville Saturday afternoon to assist the police in an attempt to track down the burglars.

Renz reported the looting of his automobile to police Saturday morning.

DRIVER PINNED UNDER TRUCK, SLIGHTLY HURT

Gerald Reynolds, 20, Williamsport, escaped serious injury when he was pinned under an overturned truckload of corn at 3:20 p. m. Friday on U. S. Route 22 west of Circleville.

Deputy Sheriff Pontius said passing motorists extricated Reynolds who suffered a minor injury to his left foot. He was enroute to Circleville, the deputy said, when the right rear tire blew out. Rain was falling and the truck skidded and turned over. Reynolds was given first aid in Berger hospital and was then removed to his home.

'VARGA GIRL' ARTIST, ESQUIRE BATTLE AGAIN

CHICAGO, Oct. 12—Peruvian artist Alberto Vargas, creator of the renowned "Varga Girl," and David Smart, publisher of Esquire magazine, were embroiled today in another round of a fight over the magazines' right to the artist's voluptuous creation.

Vargas charged in U. S. district court yesterday that the magazine's 1947 calendar supplement features a scantily-clad beauty it lists as "successor to the Varga girl," which is not a succcessor at all.

Vargas said the picture were the original Varga girl, painted by him and presented to Esquire under the terms of a 10-year contract which was cancelled last May on grounds that it was obtained illegally.

The artist asked Judge Michael L. Igoe to restrain the magazine from selling the calendars because the contract under which he drew them has been voided.

Judge Igoe gave Esquire, Inc., 20 days to answer the complaint and set Nov. 22 as the date for the arguments on the injunction.

SEARCH FOR BODY

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Oct. 12—Rescue workers searched the wreckage of a two-story building today for the body of Mrs. Maxine Nelson, 35, who was killed when the roof the building collapsed and plunged to the ground. Mrs. Nelson, an employe in a tavern on the first floor, was crushed by the falling debris. Five others were injured.

DRAFT HOLIDAY IS EXPECTED TO END JANUARY 1

Army Cancels Inductions Until After Holidays; Enlistments Large

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 — It's unlikely that the Army will extend its draft holiday beyond Jan. 1, war department sources said today.

The Army cancelled all inductions yesterday for the remainder of the year, effective Oct. 15. Calls for 20,000 men in the last half of October and 15,000 men in November had been scheduled.

The suspension was ordered because enlistments—spurred by the Army's huge recruitment drive—have been greater than expected, and probably will pass the 1,000,000 mark early next week. The Army reserved the right, however, to resume the draft if enlistments do not maintain its strength at an adequate level.

Local boards were instructed not to call men for induction or for preinduction physical examination after Oct. 15. Men called to report on Oct. 15 still must do so.

The Army said it would require 40,000 men a month to maintain its strength at 1,070,000. It had 51,750 volunteers and 25,000 inductees during September.

War department sources said the Army probably would resume draft calls after Jan. 1 and continue them until the selective service act expires March 31, 1947. They gave these reasons:

1. The draft increased the in-

Power And Trolley Talks For Peace Breakdown; New Strikes Threatened

By United Press

Government officials were optimistic today for at least a partial settlement of the 12-day-old shipping tie-up, but no progress was reported in strikes in the film, power and transit industries.

CIO marine engineers cleared the way for an agreement in the maritime dispute by yielding on their demand that any settlement reached with Gulf and Atlantic coast operators be extended to government-controlled ships in the Pacific. The other striking union previously had given in on the same issue.

In view of the union's reversal, federal conciliators expected to resume negotiations quickly and end the strike.

In the other major labor developments:

1. A strike of 5,500 hotel employes curtailed services at 18 Washington hostelries, including several boasting cabinet members, congressmen and top-ranking government officials among their clienteles.

2. Violence was renewed in the stormy Hollywood film dispute when police riot squads, swinging night sticks, cleared a path through massed pickets outside the technicolor laboratories, arresting 40 strikers.

3. The strike-bound Chicago,

INDIANS TRADE REYNOLDS FOR 'FLASH' GORDON

BOSTON, Oct. 12—The promised renovation of the New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians was underway today, with Joe Gordon going to Cleveland to bolster its defense in a trade that brought pitcher Allie Reynolds to the Yankees.

Cleveland President Bill Veeck, who bought the club in mid-season and told Indian fans he would get their team out of the second division, announced the trade last night as baseball men were leaving Boston to follow the World Series to St. Louis.

Caught Selling Secret Atom Bomb Photos

THREE MEN, one of them an Army captain, have been arrested by the FBI in Baltimore, Md., for attempting to sell top secret photographs of the atomic bomb for $7,000 to a Baltimore newspaper. According to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, the photographs were obtained by one of the men while serving with an Army bombing squadron in 1945. Under arrest are Capt. James Barnes Rike, 26, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miles Frederick Daubenheyer, 26, of Bel Air, Md., and George Wallace Comer, 23, former AAF private of Bel Air, Md.

FBI Presses Search For Atom Bomb Pictures

BALTIMORE, Oct. 12 — The federal bureau of investigation pursued a nationwide hunt today for photographs of atomic secrets. The hunt was begun following the arrest of three former servicemen who allegedly tried to sell such photographs to a Baltimore newspaper.

The trio—George W. Comer and Miles F. Deubenheyer, both of Bel Air, Md., and James B. Rike, of Chattanooga, Tenn., a former Army captain—were free on bail totalling $3,000 pending a U. S. commissioner's hearing on Oct. 23.

They were charged with trying to sell the photographs — taken from Tinian island, the Army's wartime atomic bomb air base—to the Baltimore News-Post. They set a price tag of $7,000. The newspaper's representatives turned them in to the FBI.

The arrest set in motion a hot search for any similar photographs which might be in circulation and within 48 hours, copies were picked up in California, North Carolina and Texas.

In its original announcement of the arrests, the FBI in Washington said the photographs were of the atomic bomb itself, and there were some uneasy hours for Army guardians of the top flight secret. Later, the FBI said the photos were not of the bomb but of material relating to it. Nevertheless, it added, this fact does not lessen the seriousness of the case.

The three men were arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Ernest Volkart on charges of "unlawfully publishing a photograph of a piece of classified vital military equipment without first obtaining permission from the commanding officer of the Army Air Forces on Tinian Island."

Comer was alleged to have obtained the photographs while serving with the Army Air Forces on Tinian in the Marianas island.

Rike, still in his Army captain's uniform, questioned the meaning of "publishing" as used in the formal charges but Volkart told him "that is a question for the court to decide." Actually the photos were never printed in the newspaper and the word "publishing" was used in a legal sense.

2,000,000 MAY VOTE IN OHIO ON NOVEMBER 5

COLUMBUS, Oct. 12—Two million Ohioans will take time off from their jobs or household duties on Nov. 5 to vote in the general election, the secretary of state's office estimated unofficially today.

Increased registrations were reported from most metropolitan centers of the state. Women led the swollen parade to the registration centers and were followed, in order, by World War II veterans and labor recruits.

Thirty-four counties in Ohio require pre-election registration. Several counties, including Montgomery, Trumbull and Hamilton, provide for county wide registration.

Cuyahoga county, which normally produces about one-sixth of the state's vote, had more than 650,000 potential voters on the books when registration closed Oct. 7. In 1940, a peak presidential year, the county had 631,000 qualified voters.

The election official reported registration in Columbus was approximately equal to 1942, the last off-year registration when 150,280 voters qualified. Columbus had 170,000 in 1944.

Youngstown and other Mahoning county cities set a new record with about 100,000 voters. This total was 4,000 more than in 1940 and 2,000 more than in 1942, according to election board records.

BOWLES BLASTS PRESSURE MOVE

New York Firm Defies OPA; Will Slaughter Steers For Employes

NEW YORK, Oct. 12 — Long lines stood nightlong in the rain for their chance at butcher shops today as former price administrator Chester Bowles charged that the meat shortage was politically inspired and a steel company threatened to slaughter 38 steers to feed its employes in defiance of the OPA.

Carrying umbrellas and sandwiches men and women lined up in front of butcher shops. Mrs. Bernardette Sargent, 61, died of a heart attack in a meat line yesterday just as she reached the door of a shop.

Bowles told 250 women at the second session of the National Citizens Political Action Committee's political workshop yesterday that the disappearance of meat resembled the "turning on and turning off of a water faucet" by pressure groups seeking to dent federal controls.

Bowles said meat disappeared in April during congressional discussion on extending the OPA, reappeared in July when there were no controls, and disappeared when controls were reestablished. He predicted that meat would reappear after next month's election, regardless of which party won control of congress.

Bowles accused the Republican party of attempting to "starve people" into voting its ticket, and said the GOP could do nothing to

SLAVS REJECT PEACE RULINGS

All Decisions Of Conferees At Paris Meeting Spurned By Slavs

PARIS, Oct. 12—Yugoslavia today rejected all decisions taken at the peace conference affecting her and denounced th western nations' system of "outvoting" the East as the "extreme limits of ruthlessness."

Stanoje Simic of Yugoslavia, opening the Hungarian treaty debate, repected any conference decision not approved by his country.

"Yugoslavia denies the binding power of decisions taken at this conference as regards Yugoslavia and repeats its request that the council of foreign ministers should take no final decisions that are of direct concern to our peoples without the previous conset of Yugoslavia," Simic said.

He condemned the consistent outvoting of the eastern states by the western powers during the hundreds of plenary conference roll calls in the adjournment drive.

"The Paris conference is completing its work by bringing the erroneous method of outvoting to the extreme limits of ruthlessness toward the Allied nations which are most directly and vitally concerned."

As the conference neared a vote on Hungary, fourth of the five treaties to be considered, it tossed over to the big four a hot controversy on the Greek-Bulgarian frontier. This may rival the

NEW EFFORTS AGAINST SPAIN BELIEVED NEAR

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Oct. 12—Two exiled Spanish Republican leaders and Poland's delegation to the United Nations may go in to a huddle here next week to decide how to revive the Franco case in the UN security council.

Since Spring the subject has lain dormant, but reliable officials said today that Polish delegate Oscar Lange reportedly was preparing to ask council delegates to hear once more Poland's contention that Franco and his dictatorship deserve more discipline than a slap on the wrist from the United Nations.

A reliable official said Lange probably would confer in the middle of next week with Jose Giral, premier of a Spanish Republican government-in-exile, and Juan Negrin, an equally powerful leader of a faction of Spaniards who fled their homeland because of Franco's rise to power.

The two Spanish Republicans, not always in agreement over the question of how Franco should be deposed and a new government installed in Spain, were described by the source as "more and more unified" and agreeable to get together on plans for renewed action in the UN.

TRUMAN WILL STUDY PROBLEM OVER WEEKEND

Radio Broadcast Monday Is Expected; President Still Wants Price Control

POLITICIANS WORRIED

Democratic Leaders Feel Decision May Settle Election Outcome

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12—The hottest political issue of the year—whether to remove price controls from meat — was squarely up to President Truman today.

The question now is Mr. Truman's alone to decide, left up to him by his cabinet. Many Democratic leaders feel that upon his decision may turn the outcome of the November elections.

The President gave no hint of his answer, but it will be delivered to the people in a nationwide radio broadcast within a few days. It will not come, however, until he has weighed all the evidence, probably not before Monday.

Best evidence seemed to be that the President still is convinced the stability of the economy and the fate of his party lie in continuing controls. But this would not mean he might not change his mind.

Mr. Truman gave up any weekend relaxation to give the problem his full attention and, if he decides controls should be kept, presumably to work out a way of easing the meat famine.

Time Is Short

The President has only a short time to figure out a way of getting meat back on the table. Less than four weeks remain before the November elections which will decide whether his party retains control of congress.

Meanwhile, price control lost one of its strongest advocates, Rep. Wright Patman, D., Tex., who led the fight to save the OPA bill last June. Patman said in a radio broadcast that he had called at the White House and urged Mr. Truman to lift controls from meat for good. He would not disclose the President's reaction.

For more than a week, presidential aides and political advisers

SINO - REDS SAID PULLING BACK IN MANCHURIA

NANKING, Oct. 12—The Chinese Communist army was reported withdrawing its main forces behind the great wall into Manchuria today after losing its base at Kalgan to Nationalist troops, apparently with only a slight struggle.

The newspaper Ta Kang Pao said Communist leaders held an important conference at Harbin, in northeastern Manchuria, to organize a central government in Manchuria. Mao Tse-Tung, leader of the Communists, flew from Yenan for the conference, the newspaper reported.

Dispatches from Peiping said Kalgan was 90 per cent deserted when Nationalist troops entered after fighting on its outer defenses. Kalgan lies just south of the wall.

Communist troops have lost most of their main bases inside the great wall. Their efforts to hold the bulk of Manchuria are essential to the Communist cause.

MIST IS BLAMED FOR AIRLINER CRASH AT PORT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12—A low-hanging mist that blotted out the lights of Washington's national airport was blamed today for the crash last night of a fully-loaded eastern airlines luxury liner just eight miles south of here.

The pilot and co-pilot of the DC-4, one of eastern's famed silver fleet—lay critically injured in Alexandria, (Va.) hospital. But the other two crew members and the 22 passengers—including one-year-old Marvin Edwards, Jr., of Sweetboro, N. J.—miraculously escaped injury.

The plane, crowded with late vacationists, was en route from Miami to New York. Although six hours behind schedule, the pilot messaged that "all was well" as he began to descend for his scheduled Washington landing.

have hammered home their opinions regarding public reaction to the meat famine and its probable effect on the voting November 5.

Cabinet Studies Issue

Yesterday the whole argument was rehashed in a 90-minute cabinet meeting. Afterward, Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson said no decision had been reached and that the question now is exclusively Mr. Truman's.

Meanwhile, Anderson delayed a decision on a petition by the OPA beef industry advisory committee asking the removal of price controls on cattle, calves, beef and veal. He may decide today.

Still open were several methods of getting small quantities of meat. Added together, they might take off some of the pressure.

Imports Possibility

Canadian or Argentine imports still are a possibility. High government officials also said a quarantine on Mexican cattle will be lifted before January. Normally American ranchers buy about 500,000 head of Mexican cattle a year for feeder purposes.

Meanwhile, Attorney General Tom Clark said complaints in connection with meat scarcities still are being considered by the anti-trust division.

Earlier this week, responsible department officials said no evidence had been found of illegal collusion or conspiracy to create shortages in an effort to get higher prices. Officials said last night the situation is unchanged.

FBI Not In Case

Clark stressed that the current study is being made by the anti-trust division and that the FBI is not taking part. He said price policing is OPA's job.

The latest complaint of meat withholding was made by John M. Hoober, president of the Lancaster, Pa., livestock exchange. He said 100,000 head of cattle are held in fed lots within a 20-mile radius of Omaha, Neb.

It is known that the highest American authorities are extremely worried over the Greek situation. Russia has repeatedly denounced Greece, while praising the "new democratic" Bulgaria.

The conference finished work on the Bulgarian treaty at 1:15 a. m. and reconvened at 10:15 a. m. to settle the Hungarian draft. It expects to complete the Finnish treaty tomorrow. On Monday there probably will be a big four meeting to discuss the technicalities of reviewing the conference proposals. They may be a ceremonial closing session at the conference the same day.

forced to intercede because the trials were unfair.

Acheson pointed out that the UN charter provides a specific guarantee of civil liberties in all nations. He indicated that it might be a matter of concern to the UN if there is evidence of an unfair trial.

Specifically, he cited reports of a packed courtroom with spectators demonstrating against the defendant, failure to afford Sepanic opportunity to face and cross-examine witnesses, and implications of breaches of freedom of religion.

Acheson said that Patterson has been asked to transmit a report and transcript of the trial proceedings and that any formal U. S. move will await their study.

Meanwhile, an informed source at London said that Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin has refused to intervene on behalf of Stepanic because he considers the case a purely internal affair concerning only the Yugoslavs.

Pope Pius XII denounced the trial as "villainous" and said a charge of "forced conversion" levelled against the defendant was contrary to the canonic law of the church.

increase the supply short of the two and a half years required to produce and fatten prime beef.

Bowles charged that trade associations were urging farmers to keep record herds of livestock off the market.

On the sidelines, the General Steel Products corporation and the OPA were locked in a fight over the 38 steers the company intends to slaughter for its employes. The OPA said the steers would have to be killed and distributed through normal channels.

The company said it would do what it pleased with its steers. "There is no law—OPA or otherwise—which legally prevents us from having our own meat slaughtered," said John J. McGinty, the company's attorney.

McGinty said the OPA had not formally served notice on the company not to slaughter the steers.

James A. Meader, regional OPA administrator, said the company's attention had been called to the ruling against unauthorized slaughtering and no formal order was necessary.

He said the company would be taken to court if it violated the ruling, which is the OPA's basic weapon against black markets. It prevents farmers from slaughtering their own stock and distributing it to favored buyers.

The company said the steers would be slaughtered next week at an unspecified place and distributed to 150 employes.

THREE DEAD ON HELPLESS BOAT IN ATLANTIC

Erichsson, 23, and Paul Kempainen, 27.

Heiberg was traveling to the United States with his wife, Mary.

The rescue was occuring about 800 miles west of Scotland, at a point near "Torpedo Junction", where wartime convoys from the United States to Iceland and Murmansk separated from those bound for Britain.

Another rescue vessel, the Uddeholm of the Swedish-American Mexico line, was standing by with the Stavangerfjord. The Selma Thorden, a sister ship of the Kristina, was getting into position for an attempt to tow the Kristina.

The Kristina was 1585 miles out from Norway on her way to Baltimore with a load of steel and cellulose when the fire broke out. She carried a crew of 33 and 14 passengers, including five Americans.

Reports from the Kristina said it was believed a lighted cigaret tossed in a cabin by a passenger might have started the fatal blaze. The crew nearly got the fire under control Friday, but it flared up again and enveloped the radio cabin and other parts of the central superstructure.

The 13,156-ton Stavangerfjord was captured by the Germans when Norway was invaded in 1940 and was held by them throughout the war. She returned to the North Atlantic trade shortly after Norway was liberated.

West coast negotiations have been deadlocked almost since the outset over union security demands.

DEMOCRATS BID FOR SUPPORT OF AFL MEMBERS

CHICAGO, Oct. 12—The Democratic administration bid frankly today for the continued support of the American Federation of Labor, representing more than 7,000,000 union members.

Delegates attending the AFL's 65th annual convention recessed their meetings to attend a football game today after hearing Attorney General Tom Clark appeal for support of President Truman in carrying out new deal policies, which, he said, had brought labor higher wages and better working conditions.

Clark, addressing a meeting last night, called on the AFL to help elect liberals to office and promised, in turn, to "continue to examine closely all subversive groups, including Communists and Fascists."

"Support those in the past and those in the future who will work for your best interests," Clark told the convention's 600 delegates.

He credited the late President Roosevelt with helping to construct the "smooth, paved highway" along which labor had reached its present "favorable position."

centive to enlist and with no draft the voluntary enlistments are expected to fall off sharply.

2. About 49 per cent or 480,000 of the 992,648 volunteers are in for short term enlistments. Of these 270,000 will be discharged by June 30, 1947.

3. Voluntary enlistments always slow down around the Christmas holidays because men like to be with their families.

4. Economic uncertainty and food shortages on the domestic front that have encouraged reenlistments may improve before Jan. 1.

5. Enlistments were large in September because it was the end of the Summer holiday but they are expected to drop off in November and December.

SECOND CLASS SET WEDNESDAY

Field Trip Planned When Teachers Meet To Study Soil Conservation

Second in a series of four teacher training schools in soil conservation in Pickaway county will be held next Wednesday at the Commercial Point school. A field trip will be made to a farm just planned for conservation. Some of the terraces have been constructed and the site for a pond will be viewed.

At the night session an explanation of the advantages and operation of the Pickaway Soil Conservation District will be given.

Wednesday's meeting is sponsored by the Pickaway Soil Conservation District and all farmers, leaders and others interested in prosperous agriculture in this county are invited to attend.

The first teacher training school was held Oct. 2 in the Jackson school at Fox. A field trip was conducted and at the night session J. L. Shriver, district conservationist, delivered an illustrated lecture on soil formation.

The third and fourth schools are scheduled for Oct. 30 at the Darby school, and on Nov. 13 at Atlanta.

Saint Roch (1295-1327) was a popular saint of the French church, born at Montpelier. He was the patron of those sick of the plague, and specially honored by physicians and hospitals.

"WHAT HATH GOD WROUGHT?"

HOW many Americans remembered the beginning of "rural free delivery" which celebrated its fiftieth anniversary the other day? This innovation was one of the finest contributions ever adopted in our national history. More than any other material thing, perhaps, it brought the nation together in a unity of intelligent understanding and cooperation.

And not what next? Our means of communication have grown and spread beyond all imagination, and the original telegraph and telephone themselves give way to still more wonderful methods of human intelligence and contact, until human beings seem to be on the very threshold of seeing and knowing almost any moment what is going on almost anywhere around the world.

It is indeed very wonderful. But as usual, man in his pride and satisfaction regarding his own works tends to neglect himself and his own development. He has to be brought back again and again to a new realization that, apparently, of all created things man has gone farthest and fared best in our wonderful Universe.

That is, up to the present time. The future rests with God and with Man himself. And what Man will do with the strange, new, potent knowledge he has gained, no one can tell.

TAX REDUCTION

ANY citizen who insists on tax reduction should take a good look at the present National Debt and observe how that debt, in spite of the huge sums rolling into the federal treasury, has as yet scarcely started reduction. Russell Weisman, an expert on this subject, writes as follows in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Because the treasury operated within its income in the first quarter of the present fiscal year, talk of tax reduction is being revived. If, by some chance, we manage to get through the present quarter without a deficit, the demand for tax reduction when Congress convenes in January will be almost irresistible. I have said before, and I repeat, that there can be no possible justification at this time for tax reduction. The most important single consideration in fiscal policy in the years immediately ahead is securing enough revenue by taxation to prevent a further expansion of the public debt. I am certain that, in the course of the next few years, we can cope with it only as we are willing to face realistically problems of expenditure and taxation."

Paying bigger bills with lower income is as hard for nations as for individuals.

Conventional people are annoying to go-getters, but they help to keep the world steady.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12—Republican campaign manipulator Halleck made some election claims to reporters so modest they did not get into most newspapers. When a Republican claims an expected Republican victory, it is not news. But privately Mr. Halleck had more sensational views, expressing a hunch he would get a tremendous sweep Nov. 5 of far greater scope than expected, winning a strong majority in the house and a slight control in the senate. His view was that the Democratic party is split, and the fissure will be widened in the voting, the party not even getting its usual union labor support which was its backbone in the last seven congressional elections.

The campaign has been so quiet you could hear a Pepper drop or a Wallace fall. But padded rolling pins have been flying in the Democratic camp. The meat famine coming atop the Wallace affair has spread a panic among Democratic candidates in eastern cities. They have been screaming to Mr. Truman privately and publicly for relief of some sort, which will return beef to all Democratic tables at least, before the voting starts. Indeed, the Republicans believe a report they have heard for the Democratic camp, that Mike Monroney, chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee, chosen for that job because his district was safe, and therefore he could campaign for others in need, instead of for himself, had to rush back to his home district in Oklahoma City on a well concealed trip to mend his own fences.

This much I know—Democratic Senate Leader Barkley has embarked on 35 campaign speeches in Kentucky. When a man of Barkley's official connection with the White House, age and health, goes into such incessant and strenuous activity merely to save a Democratic senate seat and perhaps a Louisville congressman or two, you may be sure the inner Demo reports are very bad.

The spots where the Republicans expect to gain most are the large industrial states like Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio—places in which the unions have been strongest. They cannot expect to reap much in Illinois or Indiana where they are already strong. In Illinois they might pick up a district or two in Ed Kelley's Chicago, and in Indiana their hopes are centered in the Gary district, where the foreign language groups have split over the peace troubles. But their hopes even extend to wild and wooly Washington, in which the unions have been dominant, and to California.

Out of Pennsylvania they expect to promote a new presidential candidacy in the size of the majority by which their Gov. Martin beats Joe Guffey. Certainly Mr. Guffey has been getting prominent Democrats from outside the state to undertake the argument for him, and lend respectability to his claims. He is thoroughly CIO, but what John Lewis' miners may do to him in the coal districts will be shown only by the counted votes.

The polls have been slow and inconclusive. Actually some of the Republican leaders are waiting to hear what Mr. Gallup says. As he never says much until the last week before election, these Republican bigwigs, if not the nation, will remain on tiptoe for a couple of weeks yet. Cer-

DIET AND HEALTH

Modern Light On Age-Old Disease

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

ASTHMA has been known for ages, but during most of those years there was virtually nothing which could be done about it. Every doctor observed patients who were made miserable from time to time by attacks of wheezing, coughing and difficult breathing, but none could suggest a reason for the attacks and hence, real treatment was impossible.

And then, with the discovery that allergy, or oversensitiveness to certain substances, might produce disease of various kinds, medical science began to get some insight into asthma.

Result of Allergy

According to Dr. Jonathan Forman of Columbus, Ohio, asthma is practically always the result of an allergy. The affected person may be allergic to something which he breathes in or to some food which he eats. He may be sensitive to the poisons formed by germs, to chemicals, to serums and to such things as penicillin.

Some persons react to heat, light and cold in an exaggerated manner. These individuals are said to have a physical allergy. Other people are sensitive to certain drugs, among which, one of the most common offenders is aspirin.

So, today, instead of having no answer as to the cause of asthma, we have almost too many. This means that each patient becomes an individual problem and that in every case a painstaking and sometimes, tedious, search for the offending substance must be made by the doctor.

Further Complicated

The treatment of asthma is further complicated by the fact that attacks, though basically due to some allergy, are often brought on by some other factor. You can understand clearly just what this means if you think of the allergy as a loaded gun; the other factors act as a trigger mechanism which causes it to go off.

These "trigger" factors include changes in the air pressure, the temperature, emotional upsets and worry, fatigue and infections in the teeth, tonsils, sinuses, or elsewhere in the body. Even constipation may start a seizure.

Poor nutrition, lack of acid in the stomach, a deficiency of vitamins, and irritation from dirt, dust or fumes, all may be things which start off the attack in many instances. However, there is much that the physician can do to relieve the symptoms even if he cannot get rid of the disorder altogether.

In treating asthma, of course, an attempt should be made to keep the patient out of contact with the substances to which he is particularly sensitive. This is not always possible. However, effort should be made to avoid contact with dust, pollen, feathers and hair fragments.

Sometimes, injections of gradually increasing amounts of the substance to which the person is sensitive may be given and may help to make the disease less severe.

In many instances, however, dependence for relief must be upon various drugs such as epinephrine, ephedrine and aminophylline. When there is excessive secretion from the bronchi or small tubes in the lungs, potassium iodide is often helpful.

Of course, asthma must always be managed under the directions of the physician.

CHAPTER FORTY

WHEN THEY reached Fairton Craig waited while Abby went upstairs to say goodby to her father. Val's door was shut. Abby did not knock on it. She knocked on Wallace's door instead and Mrs. Heddon admitted her. She said, "He's had a good nap and some nourishment . . ." and slipped away, smiling.

Standing by the bed Abby made her report on Jay. He wasn't in too much pain. She had talked to the nurse. It would take time, his were not young bones; but he'd be all right. Wallace listened, and said, "He's to have every comfort, I told Dr. Lansing that; I'm telling you so that you'll see to it." He added, "You will come up, won't you, Abby?"

She said, as she had to Craig, "I'll have to talk to Barry." But she added, "Val mighn't like it, Father."

"Valentine?" His eyes were amused. "Why not?"

"It's a fairly delicate situation, isn't it? After all, this is her house. She gives the orders."

"It's mine," he said calmly, "and I give them. You won't be encroaching upon her privileges, my dear. You'll help me. Craig will be away, and Jay. That means I'll need someone to take over in the gallery."

"The gallery?" she asked. She had forgotten the public Thursdays.

He reminded her, "Craig won't be here to look after visitors," he said.

"I hadn't thought of that. Why don't you withdraw the offer . . . now that you are ill? People will understand. Besides, I thought, not many come."

"They did at first, mainly out of curiosity. But some, with a real interest, still come. And they—however few—must be conducted through the gallery by someone who knows the paintings. Val is intelligent and has picked up a considerable smattering, but even if she wished, she could hardly act as guide."

Before she could answer he said, "Talk it over with Barry, then. I hope he will be amenable."

Abby reached home late in the afternoon, and the telephone rang shortly after she had washed the dust from her face and hands. It was Barry. How was her father, and Jay? Good. Val, too? "That's fine," he said. He added that he'd be late. She must be tired . . . why not meet him at the Italian joint—whatever she had planned for dinner would keep, wouldn't it?

She reached the restaurant first and waited at their corner table. It was a good little place. It no longer served lavish slices of spiced sausage, the elegant veal dishes were rarely on the menu . . . and the steaks and chops, which had served as a concession to American tastes, were no longer to be found. Chicken was a rarity, but the spaghetti was as delicious and filling as ever, and the meat sauce was still meat. The green salads were very special, raviolis abounded, and the wine was good.

Barry came tearing in, and sat down. He said, "Hi," and looked at her. That kind of look was almost as satisfactory as a kiss. He commented, "You look bushed. Better have a drink. I'll order."

The waiter came, smiling; the order was given.

Barry leaned back. He said, "Give."

She reported, first on the medical side. "Poor old Jay," she said, her eyes clouding. "He's had, and will have, a wretched time."

"You couldn't kill him with a bazooka, honey," said Barry. The drinks had come, and he lifted his glass. "To us," he said.

Abby tasted her cocktail, set it down. She said, "Father wants us to come out and live with him for a while."

"My Lord, why? As protection against Val?" asked Barry, amused.

She explained: Craig's holiday—at which Barry quirked an eyebrow; the notes for the book; the gallery.

"Do you want it that way?" asked Barry.

She looked at him, an open regard. "Not very much," she admitted.

"Well then, heck, say no. You have an excuse. . . . I could come only week-ends. But I have to go through the motions of my job and besides, the law class."

She said, "I don't see how I could stand it without you."

"You don't have to. I don't get it, anyway," he said. "Sounds okay on the surface, I suppose. But—"

She said, tentatively, "Craig advised me to say no, too. He said you shouldn't be exposed to Val!"

"He said that? Handsome of him," said Barry. "What a character."

"He seems to think she's . . . an unexploded bomb," said Abby.

"I've seen 'em," said Barry briefly, "and avoided 'em."

She hesitated; then made up her mind, told him what her father had said of Val and Craig. Barry looked less astonished than she had expected. He remarked, after a moment, "Well, it's logical enough. Explains Emerson's solicitude for me, perhaps. Bomb exploded in HIS face."

"If I don't go," said Abby, "Craig will think—"

"What do you care what he thinks?"

"I don't." She lifted her chin. All day she had thought of one phrase of her father's; one he had not bothered to explain . . . "I married Valentine to protect you," he had said. From whom, from what?

"Then," asked Barry, as their order came, "what's the matter with you? Write your father, say you can't leave town . . . and me." He grinned. "I'll beat you if you do. Tell him that."

She said slowly, "You're out a good deal. I'd see almost as much of you if I did go . . ."

He put down his fork. "What's this leading up to?" he demanded, "and besides, it isn't true. . . . How about breakfast, and long before breakfast?"

She said, "Craig doesn't want me to go."

"So you've said."

"I don't know about Val . . . it wasn't discussed with her."

He said, "Oh, for Pete's sake, Val wouldn't care."

"You know her better than I do," said Abby.

"What does that mean? Make up your mind; if you want to go, go ahead. You're grown up, I hope; you can make up your mind. And it's nothing to me what you do about it. Okay, one way or the other."

"Nothing to you? You mean you wouldn't mind?"

"Don't twist things," he said irritably. "Lord, how like a woman. Sure, I'd mind. I'd miss you like the devil. But if you want to go, do so . . . but don't make an issue of it . . . dragging in Emerson, Val, all the rest. If you want to come all over filial, that's all right by me. I don't see how the old so-and-so rates it, but . . . hey, were you thinking about the will?"

She had told him that, too. She hadn't been thinking about it.

"No, and I don't believe it," she said. "Craig probably just dreamed it up because Malcolm came out."

"Malcolm . . . oh, that guy." He looked at her and grinned. "Thinking you might run into him again?" he teased genially, "raking up an ember or two? I'll break his blamed neck."

She laughed, warmed, somewhat happier. "Thanks. I wasn't thinking about him, though."

He said, "If there's anything in this will business, maybe you'd better stick around awhile."

"But you've never cared about the money," she reminded him.

"No, that's a fact. But I haven't any right to prevent you from looking after your interests, darling. It would have been no hair off my hide if your father had cut you off with a dime when we married. . . . I could look after you. But if he didn't then, and if he is planning some shenanigans now—needled by Val—you'd be a dope to sit back and say, Let her have the lot. Anything could happen to me. I might get bumped off by a taxi, or an opponent. Madge might erase Bob via Reno and remarry . . . someone who'd be sure to outlive her; the Elson estate could go to pot. Get me straight, I wouldn't raise a hand, literally, to rescue an antique dollar of the Wallace dough, as far as its usefulness to me is concerned. But it would be darned unjust to you, at this juncture, if your father grew whimsical."

"You're advising me to go?"

"Nope."

She considered a moment. She said presently, "I think I'll go then, Barry."

"Okay," he said. "It's your headache. You aren't eating. Thought you were hungry."

"I thought so, too," she said. "I felt caved in. But I don't know."

She lay long awake that night . . . listening to Barry's even breathing. She thought, I believed I knew him . . . or was beginning to know him . . . that he was no longer a stranger. Yet, every now and then . . .

Why hadn't he been angry, or, if not angry, amused when she had told him what Craig said about Val . . . about keeping Barry away from Val? He hadn't been either . . . just, not quite.

She hadn't told him the other thing Craig had said . . . "Barry came up fast enough to console his ex-girl friend."

Her small jaw tightened. She thought, Craig knows I'm afraid of her . . . she changed the word quickly . . . that I distrust her. He's jealous . . . of her position in the house; he hates her because, if what Father said is true, she attracts him. He's jealous of Barry.

She thought drearily of the house in Fairton, and the people who would come to it; of meals with Val and her father; of hours in the library; of the wild, young spring green on the hills and in the gardens . . . of seeing Barry week-ends and never alone until they were shut away from the others in their room. She couldn't go. She told herself, Tomorrow I'll tell Barry I've changed my mind.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, October 12

THE astral indications are for a difficult, perplexing and discouraging state of affairs, with certain obscure and chaotic situations to meet, and with little insight or direction for overcoming or sidestepping. The mind seems covered with confusion, unable to cope with impending crises, and with inner urges or prompting to rebellious, erratic, angry, and turbulent reactions, but adding to the impasse.

Intemperance of word, acts and any show of rash and hectic conduct but aggravate an unpromising situation. Calm and composed demeanor may avert serious loss, estrangements or regrets.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of trying, chaotic, perplexing and difficult circumstances, which it may be almost impossible to direct into profitable or happy channels. While the energies may be aggressive, yet the mentality may be unable to meet static or frustrating situations, while a flare into emotional, angry, impetuous or belligerent clashes, would do little to help a difficult state of affairs.

Keep calm, composed and, above all, considerate and courteous, lest danger and deep personal loss "cap the climax."

A child born on this day will have an impetuous and contradictory state of mind, urging it into dangerous and unprofitable crises, unless it be disciplined and wisely directed.

For Sunday, October 13

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds augury of an exceptionally lively state of affairs, with the energies, faculties and ambitions keyed to high performance. It is a time to aim at advanced goals, to initiate new projects and to secure the solid support of those in high places who may be definitely impressed by progressive ideas or audacious propositions. Present original ideas but use good judgment.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of an interesting, eventful and progressive year, in which fresh ideas may attract the hearty support of those in influence and financial standing. These may be stimulated by novelty, new techniques and ambitious projects if such be developed on sound and workable premsels, well organized and practical. Keep alert to confusion or distorted mental slants. Be straightforward.

A child born on this day will be endowed with original and ingenious ideas and plans and has the practical constructive ability to win support from influential sources.

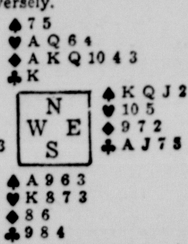
The Authority on Authorities"

AN AID TO DISCOVERY

COLUMBUS didn't need any gadgets like the Blackwood convention to aid him in his discoveries. Neither do some of the ablest natural bidders. But plenty of average bidders find it invaluable to them as an aid to finding out whether or not it is advisable to reach out for a slam. Its main operation consists in keeping them out of a small slam when the opponents hold two aces, or out of a grand slam when one ace is held adversely.



(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

In a big social duplicate, several of the finest pairs bid this deal as shown in Table 1, and several as in Table 2—the pairs using the Blackwood convention.

At one other table, the only pair which missed the slam began the bidding as in Table 1 and went on the same excepting that South passed the 5-Hearts bid. His excuse, when the 12 tricks had been taken, was that "I didn't have a strong hand, one which looked like a slam." Of course he didn't have a strong hand, but he did have one which was relatively strong, considering that North could jump that way on his first rebid, and then carry him all the way to five-odd when he heard the hearts for the first time. Any post-graduate bidder should have taken the chance, especially since he had an ace. North's going to five had told him he considered he lacked not more than two top tricks and that he expected to furnish enough trick-takers after South got the lead.

This deal, however, well illustrates how the stronger and more experienced player should defer to his partner. South had wanted to use the Blackwood convention, but North refused. He would have assured himself a better partner in South if he had done what the lesser player wished—which generally pays.

Your Week-End Question

Any average player knows that the discard of a higher spot card followed by a lower card of the same suit can be a signal asking for a lead of that suit. What other meaning can it often have?

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Back, diary, after a long absence. Forced to quit way back in the war days during the labor shortage and when we all were looking forward to peace, reconversion and the resumption of what we thought was the plentiful American life. Shortages during the war we accepted, believing, as we were told, that they were essential to victory. And they undoubtedly were. But most of us are unable to understand to what they are essential now. Could it be that our national economy planners have erred? Retailers blame wholesalers, the wholesalers blame processors, processors blame producers, producers blame labor, labor blames capital, Republicans blame Democrats, Democrats blame Republicans. Me, I'm tired of eating eggs.

Mourned the passing of Frank Lynch. None hereabouts need be told of the goodness of the man, his civic pride, his devotion to public welfare undertakings, his unselfishness. Came the sickness that finally resulted in his death and Frank was an invalid. The scrivener called on him and found him deeply discouraged. He lamented his ability to go ahead as he always had done. Attention was called to the fact that this column had referred to him on several occasions as Circleville's Number One citizen. And that, even though an invalid, he remained Circleville's Number One citizen. That pleased him because he was aware that the statement was sincere. I am glad I said it to him then rather than waiting until now. All of you have lost a friend in the passing of Frank.

Met Dick Martin on the street and he was almost in tears. Had just completed a card for the Elks, a card of respect for Frank. For a time the conversation was the same as wherever men met during the day, a tribute. And then Dick told me a story that bears repeating. A friend of Dick's, a good man and the head of a fine family, a hard working and honest citizen here died suddenly. Dick had just heard about the death when a group of men he was reared with entered his shop. The visitors sought a contribution to help buy another bottle of whisky for themselves. All were in various stages of intoxication. Dick looked them over and then preached one of the most effective sermons I ever have heard. "You fellows are no good," he said. "You never have been any good, probably never will be. All of you knew————. Well, the Good Lord has seen fit to take him away. If the Lord sees fit to take away that type of man and leave such no-goods as you, don't you think that one of you at least should do his best to fill that vacant place. The drunks filed out of Dick's shop without a word. That sermon had sunk deep. (Most of the men in that party are guests of Sheriff Charlie Radcliff until after Pumpkin Show. The others probably will be with Charlie by the week end.)

Paul Makes a New Start

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Oct. 13 is Acts 8:1-3; 9:1-19; 22:4-16; 26:9-18; I Corinthians 15:8-10; Galatians 1:11-16, the Memory Verse being Psalm 122:1, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of Jehovah.")

WE STUDY today the conversion of Saul, Pharisee and persecutor of Christians, to Paul, the apostle, assigned by divine command to "carry the message to the Gentiles."

When Stephen, the first Christian martyr, was stoned to death in Jerusalem, Saul, as he was then called, stood by, consenting to his death. "And devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him."

After the death of Stephen there began the first persecution of the followers of Christ. Paul was active in this persecution, "making havock of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women committed them to prison."

Then Saul, "breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the high priest."

He asked for letters to the rulers of the synagogue in Damascus, so that if he found any of these "heretics" there he would bring them bound to Jerusalem.

Saul and his company started to Damascus, but when they were nearing the city, "about noon," there shone a great light about them, causing Saul to fall from his horse. Out of the light a voice said, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou Me?" Trembling and astonished, Saul asked, "Who art Thou, Lord?" and the voice answered, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks."

Men Speechless

The men who were with him were speechless with amazement, as they saw the light but did not hear what was said. Saul asked what the Lord would have him do, and he was told to go into the city, "and it shall be told thee what thou must do."

When Saul rose to his feet he could not see, and he remained blind for three days and nights after his men had led him into the city, and he neither ate nor drank.

Now in Damascus lived a man named Ananias who was a devout man, and to him the Lord came in a vision and told him to go to the street called Straight and ask at the house of Judas for Saul of Tarsus who had had a vision of a man named Ananias who would come to him and restore his sight. Ananias said that he had heard of this man, Saul, and how he had persecuted Christians, but the Lord said, "Go thy way; for he is a chosen vessel unto Me, to bear My name before the Gentiles and Kings, and the children of Israel."

Obediently Ananias hastened to the street called Straight—which is still in Damascus—and found Paul. To him Ananias said, "Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be fulfilled with the Holy Ghost."

Thereupon, Ananias laid his hands on Paul, and straightway his sight was restored, and he arose and was baptized. Then he ate and was strengthened, and stayed some days with the brethren in Damascus.

Paul told of these wonderful incidents when he was talking to the mob in Jerusalem who were intent on killing him, and also when he was brought before Agrippa at Caesarea.

Paul Regrets Past Life

All his life Paul mourned about his actions before he saw the light and heard the voice of Jesus speaking to him. Writing to the Corinthians, in I Corinthians 15:9, he said, "For I am the least of the apostles, that am not meet to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

"But by the grace of God I am what I am: and His grace which was bestowed upon me was not in vain; but I labored more abundantly than they all; yet not I, but the grace of God which was with me."

And again in Galatians: "But I certify to you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

"For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ."

Then he reminds them that he has told them how he persecuted the followers of Jesus when he was prominent in the Jewish temple councils, and refers to the revelation of Christ which he received and which changed his whole outlook and manner of life.

In this dramatic manner, Saul's life was altered, and he became "the most successful promoter of Christianity," instead of the cruel persecutor of its followers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY PROGRAM IS ANNOUNCED

Continuing the rally emphasis in the church school and the church attendance crusade in the worship service, the First United Brethren Church, East Main street, will observe children's rally, Sunday beginning at 9:15 A. M.

The following program under the supervision of Miss Gladys Noggle, children's director, will be heard in the opening exercise: processional; "True Hearted, Wholehearted;" invocation by June Wilkinson; children's response: "Into My Heart," first reader introducing the theme of the rally, "Love God With All Your Heart," will be Donald Eldridge; "Rally Day", an exercise, by Mae Elizabeth Martin, Linda Dresbach, Nancy Ankrom, Kathleen Hare, Janet Eccard, Elaine Woodward, Rebecca Strawser and Barbara Rhodes; second reader: Margaret Dresbach; exercise, "God Give Us Time," by Fern Wise, Janet Smalley, Irene Rife, Barbara Smalley, Ruth Styers, Janet Emerine, Marilyn Sowers and Rosemary Strawser; vocal solo, "I Abide in Him," by Roy Huffer, Jr.; third reader: Ernest Martin; exercise, "If God Has Given," by Wendell Emerine, Marsha Morgan, Helen Rife, Barbara Sowers and Delores Jean Valentine; "We Five," an exercise by David Steele, Gwen Jenkins, Donna Leist, Wilma Wilkinson and Alfred Smalley. "What Makes A Chuch," an exercise by Tommy Peters, Elliott Hawkes, Fred Brown, Ronald Bennington, Donald Eldridge and Roger Bennington. Song, "Brethren, Heed the Call to Action," by Ruth Styers, Marilyn Francis, Phyllis Dresbach, Rosemary Strawser and Janet Emerine.

Included for recognition will be the cradle role department under the superintendency of Mrs. Robert Dick. In the closing exercise, the children will present a novelty skit as a surprise stunt for boosting the youth rally, Sunday, October 20.

In the morning worship, the pastor, Rev. Carl L. Wilson, will deliver another sermon in the series on the general theme, "The Church." "Putting Your Church on the Map" is Sunday's topic.

Miss Lucille Kirkwood will preside at the console and present, "Sunlit Cloisters" by Eichhorn; "Impromptu Religioso" by Armstrong and "March in F" by Roberts. The choir with Charles Kirkpatrick directing will sing the anthem, "O, Saviour of the World," by John Goss.

In the worship hour, the pastor will administer the rite of Holy Baptism for infants and older children. A class will also be received into church membership. Those wishing to participate in either of these rites should make their wishes known to the receptionist usher as they enter the sanctuary.

Junior Church will be held at 10:30 A. M. in the Children's Chapel. Evening worship will be held at 7:30 P. M.

All services are open to the public with an invitation extended to those not attending church elsewhere.

CALVARY RALLY DAY PROGRAM SET FOR SUNDAY

Rall Day will be observed this Sunday at Calvary Evangelical church.

The services of the morning will be in the form of one combined service starting at 9 a. m. instead of the usual church school and church service. An effort is being made to have all members of the church school out for this occasion.

A special service has been planned for the morning which includes a vocal solo by Miss Ethel Pritchard, an anthem by the choir, and other special music. The Sunday School lesson will be discussed by six members of the school, each answering a specific question regarding the apostle Paul's conversion.

At the evening service at 7:30, the pastor will bring a message entitled "The Responsibility of Hearing", based on the parable of the soils. This is the second in a series of sermons on the parables of Jesus.

Excerpt from Teachings of the BAHAI' FAITH

"Prejudices of all kinds are destructive. All warfare and bloodshed in human history have been the outcome of prejudice. This earth is one home and nativity. As a city is the home of all of its inhabitants, so the earth's surface is one wide, native home for all races of humankind. Why should we be separated by artificial or imaginary boundaries?"

DOBSON'S WIFE SAYS BIG STEAK MADE JOE WIN

BOSTON, Oct. 12—Without showing her pretty face in the dugout even, Mrs. Joe Dobson of the Red Sox auxiliary claimed credit today for the World Series victory her hubby pitched yesterday against the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It was that steak I got him, that's what it was," said pretty Maxine Dobson, who sat tensely in her box-seat while her husband pitched the greatest game of his career, beating the Cardinals, 6 to 3.

"He hasn't had a square meal since we've been in Boston. Last night—because I had asked for steak a long time in advance—the butcher said, 'okay give him a square meal if he's going to pitch tomorrow.'

"So we had it and boy, it was luscious! It did things to you. That's the answer and don't let Joe tell you otherwise."

Dobson—a handsome guy who combines a Frank Sinatra haircut with a Bing Crosby profile then spoils it with a Jimmy Durante voice—said that it wasn't the steak at all.

"It was a fine piece of beef—my first in Boston—but I think the reason I won the ball game today was on account of my atom ball," he said.

"I gave 'em my fast ball, then my curve, then my slider, and when I got in trouble I let go with the atom ball. That was my secret weapon."

Asked what the atom ball might be, he replied:

"It was the pitch I used whenever I got into trouble. And it was usually a down-breaking curve that exploded like 'operation crossroads.'

CARROLL RANKS BOSOX BIG FAVORITES TO WIN

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12—Betting Commissioner James J. Carroll, accepting no more bets on the outcome of the World Series, ranked the Boston Red Sox as odds-on favorites to win tomorrow's sixth game.

The Red Sox are 7 to 10 if Dave Ferriss pitches against the Cards' Harry Brecheen, who will be 6 to 5; if Harris pitches for Boston, the Sox are 4 to 5 against even money on the Cards.

BOSOX REGAIN FAVORITE ROLE WITH VICTORY

Dyer Counts On Seventh Game While Cronin Says Series Will End Sunday

ABOARD THE WORLD SERIES SPECIAL EN ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12—Joe Cronin, his Boston Red Sox out in front three games to two, indicated strongly today that he was going with the southpaw slants of Mickey Harris in the sixth game of the World Series tomorrow while Manager Eddie Dyer of the Cardinals named Harry (The Cat) Brecheen to pitch for St. Louis.

"It will be Harris or Dave Ferriss," Cronin said as his club left Fenway park for the banks of the Mississippi, but he tipped his hand several times later when he always named Harris first.

Dyer, his 49th birthday a sad affair, was definite about Brecheen as his club sped by train toward Sportsman's Park. "I don't know who my pitcher will be for the seventh game," he said, "but I do know there is going to be a seventh game."

He was counting on Brecheen to come through again tomorrow as he did in the second game Monday when he set down the American League champions on four scattered hits to win, 3 to 0.

Should Brecheen falter there would not be a seventh game. If there is it will be played at St. Louis, site of the first two games, on Tuesday. Monday being held open for ticket sales, just as today was an off day to enable the teams to change cities.

For most of the Red Sox an open date for traveling was not necessary as all the club except eight players flew to St. Louis last night after the Red Sox had beaten the Cardinals 6 to 3 to gain a one game advantage. All but those eight arrived last night.

While Dyer was definite about Brecheen, Cronin refused to be pinned down on his sixth game hurler. Celebrating his 40th birthday—and he didn't want any better present than his club gave yesterday, even if it was a day early—he just kept saying "Harris or Ferriss."

For the fifth game he had kept saying "Dobson or Harris" and husky Joe got the call and responded with a four hitter that would have resulted in a shutout except for three errors, two of them by Johnny Pesky, leading to the three unearned Cardinal runs.

But because Sportsmans Park favors left handed pitchers, Harris, who lost the second game to Brecheen although he pitched good ball, was expected to get the nod. That would give Ferriss, the 4 to 0 winner of the third game, an additional two days rest in event the seventh contest is necessary.

"Either way," jovial Joe said, "we expect to wind it up. I'm not even thinking about a seventh game."

By winning the fifth game, the Red Sox became the favorites to win the series, just as they were when the classic started. The Cards found themselves in the favorites role for only 24 hours, taking over as choices when they won that baseball history-making fourth game 12 to 3. But they soon slipped back to the status of underdogs after Dobson got through with them yesterday.

Noted As Tigers Took Loss No. 2

Coaches Steve Brudzinski and Tommy Bennett were well-pleased with the fight displayed by the Tigers . . . They were disappointed that two touchdowns were "given" to the Cavaliers but not nearly as disappointed as visiting coaches Homer Edgington and Don Hair when those fumbles stopped their boys when they were ready to score . . . Incidentally, Hair, who scouted the Tigers here, worked from the pressbox sending notes to Edgington on the bench . . . He spotted weaknesses from the vantage point offered by the pressbox and relayed instructions on notes in tubes which he tossed down to a manager . . .

"Red" Crawford and Dean Smallwood were hurt during the game but neither is believed seriously injured . . . Smallwood had to leave the game when he got a hard blow in the stomach . . . After the game it was feared Crawford had a broken finger but examination showed it may be only a sprain . . .

The Chillicothe band marched on the field before the game started but neither the visitors or Circleville's band appeared at the half . . . The rain poured down during the entire game . . . A few fathers braved the elements and were introduced at the half by John Heiskell . . . Dads, and other men representing players, introduced were Carl Radcliff, George Fissell, John Carter, Art Steele, Charles Hill, Fred Boggs, Paul Woodward, Tom Pettit, Roland Brentlinger, Bill Thomas, Richard Dawson, Chester Starkey, John Crawford, Pearl Lovensheimer, Clarence Francis, Boyd Stout, Russell Lane . . .

Extra bleachers, borrowed from Walnut and Ashville high schools and Ted Lewis park were available for use but there were a few vacant spaces because of the dampness . . . The crowd totaled about 2,500, about the same as the record Westerville attendance, according to Virgil Cress . . . A large percentage came from Chillicothe . . . Many spectators watched from high school windows . . .

CARD FANS ASK FOR NEW TEAM OF ANNOUNCERS

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 12—St. Louis baseball fans waited today to see if the proposal of acting Mayor Albert Schweitzer that new announcers be appointed for the last games of the World Series would be adopted.

Schweitzer telegraphed the Gillette Safety Razor company, sponsors of the series broadcast, that St. Louis fans were "highly displeased" with the work of announcers Arch McDonald and Jim Britt in the first five games and asked that Dizzy Dean, Gabby Street, Johnny O'Hara, or Harry Caray be appointed to work with a Boston announcer.

FIRST HALF IS SCORELESS ON DAMP GRIDIRON

Visitors Run Over Three Touchdowns In Last Two Quarters

Playing in a driving rain Circleville Tigers won a "moral victory" the first half, then bowed to superior size and speed the second half to lose 20-0 to Chillicothe gridders here Friday night before a large "Dad's Night" crowd.

In dropping their second game of the season the Tigers held the visiting Cavaliers to a 0-0 tie the first half, but Chillicothe scored twice the third quarter and again just before the game ended.

Outmanned, outweighed and outspeeded, the Tigers had one outstanding feature—their fight. They fought hard all the way and many disappointed Chillicothe fans were mumbling at the half. The Tigers were alert all the time and saved at least two scores by recovering fumbles. John Fissel grabbed two almost on the goal line. Carl Radcliff and Jim Carter also covered the ball when it was deep in their territory and Bob Steele grabbed one in Chillicothe territory.

For the first few minutes the teams exchanged punts, playing cautious ball on the wet field. Then the visitors threatened. Taking the ball on their 40 after a punt, two plunges by Kirkwood netted a first down. Bob Kelley was shaken loose and galloped to the 3-yard line where he was pulled down by "Red" Crawford just as the first quarter ended.

Kirkwood drove to about the one but as the Cavaliers surged forward to score on the next play they fumbled and Fissell recovered.

Bob Steele punted from behind his own goal line and the Cavaliers started back. They made a nice gain on an Arledge to Shearrow pass and got down to about the two-yard line but a five-yard penalty set them back to the seven where the Tigers held.

The next Chillicothe threat was stopped on the 18 when Fissell recovered a fumble.

The Cavaliers came back the second half determined to score and marched 73 yards to do just that. Circleville kicked off and the visitors put the ball in play on their own 27. Thirteen plays netted four first downs and the score with speedy Clarence Johnson going the last four. Kirkwood plunged for the seventh point.

The Tigers got their best break and chance to score a few minutes later when Steele recovered a Chillicothe fumble on the Cavalier 30 yard line but the visitors turned it into a touchdown.

Three line plays netted about two yards and Steele elected to pass on fourth down. Street intercepted the pass and galloped 78 yards to score. Again Kirkwood plunged over.

In the fourth period the Cavaliers were stopped on the 19 when Radcliff recovered a fumble. Two plays later Brundige intercepted a Circleville pass and took it down to the Circleville 15. A line play made four, but again the slippery ball was fumbled with Carter recovering on the 17.

A pass was incomplete. Crawford made a couple of yards in three tries and on fourth down Steele ran the ball up to the 20. On the next play Kelly rambled for 16 yards and then Dunkle rammed over for a touchdown. Kelly's plunge for extra point was stopped.

Before Circleville could put the ball in play after the kickoff the game ended.

Next week Wilmington comes here.

BUFFALO STILL SEEKING FIRST LEAGUE VICTORY

By United Press

The Buffalo Bisons were the only victory-less team in the All-America conference today, but their loss was the gain of the Miami Seahawks, whose last-minute 17 to 14 victory over Buffalo was their first of the year.

At Brooklyn last night the last minute was the most important, too, as the Chicago Rockets loosed a 64-yard forward-lateral pass play for a touchdown and a 21 to 21 tie with the Dodgers.

Words of Wisdom

What's gone and past help, should be past grief.—Shapespeare.

Today's Horoscope

You love, work and play with enthusiasm and energy. You are proud and reserved, discreet in your associations, and strive to attain high ideals. Choose a mate born under your own sign and you will be happy. Depression or the "blues" may assail you today if you have not had proper rest. It is best to take things slowly all day, the aspects are not conducive to clear thinking, so postpone difficult jobs until late in the day. The pace of living will be halted somewhat on this date, so fit your pace to that of the stars. All mental work, thought processes and speaking are under restrictive rays.

Hints on Etiquette

Do you find yourself pushing and shoving when you are in a line about to board a train, street car or bus? Relax and "remember your manners" and you will probably get a seat just as easily, and you will not feel guilty of discourteous conduct.

Horoscope for Sunday

A birthday on this date means you have the qualities of a great leader. You can grasp any situation quickly and accurately, and your judgment is good. You have an excellent memory, learn readily and can command the attention and respect of others. You require a strong love and like attention. Today mental horizons are limited, so don't plan your future. Creative efforts get little planetary help. Government, legal and career matters all receive solar stimulation, so attend to them. The moon enters Gemini at 2:37 p. m. All types of activity slowed down as the week ended. Focus your thoughts on the Sabbath, devoting some of the evening hours to study, meditation and prayer.

Tot, 25 Months Old, Killed On Railroad Tracks At Lockbourne

IVAN ADKINS IS STRUCK BY C & O ENGINE

Baby Born In Ashville Said To Have Wandered Into Path Of Freight Train

Tragedy struck in the village of Lockbourne, Friday, and snuffed out the life of a 25-month-old baby.

Oblivious to an approaching freight train little Ivan Eugene Adkins toddled from the railroad house car in which the Adkins family resides and onto the tracks of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad.

The baby was struck by the locomotive of a southbound train and was killed almost instantly.

The youngster was dead when the Hamilton township emergency squad arrived at the scene from Obetz. He sustained fatal head injuries.

Ivan was born Sept. 11, 1944 at Ashville, the son of Ivan Adkins and Betty Carr Adkins.

Emergency squad members said the father, employed as a railroad section hand, is 18 and the mother 17 years old.

Besides his parents Ivan is survived by a brother, Melvin.

The body was removed to the Schlegel funeral home at Ashville where funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Sunday.

Burial will take place in the South Bloomfield cemetery.

FORMER NAVAL HERO CONFESSES $725,880 THEFT

Youth, 22, Says He Took Money To Try To Win Back Fiancee

CHICAGO, Oct. 12—A discharged naval hero, led into a police trap by the girl he loved, confessed the theft of $725,880 today and agreed to return to Miami, Fla., "to face the music."

Elmer S. Hurt, 22, a corsage box tucked under his arm and a bracelet and diamond engagement ring in his right hand coat pocket, was seized on a downtown street corner when he kept a date with the girl.

At the detective bureau, Hurt burst into sobs and confessed taking the money in an effort to win back his fiancee, who had broken her engagement to him.

"I loved her that much," he said simply.

Hurt led police to his hotel room and a drop-a-dime railroad station locker, where they recovered nearly $29,000 in cash and $697,000 in money orders which, he admitted stealing from an American Express Company branch in Miami. The money orders, police said, were negotiable anywhere in the world.

Police said Hurt talked freely of the embezzlement and had expressed willingness to sign extradition papers and return to Miami, where he will be charged with embezzlement, grand larceny and theft. A hearing probably will take place Monday, police said, and then he will be turned over to Miami authorities.

Hurt, a former pharmacist's mate 2nd class, who was awarded the bronze star for gallantry at Okinawa, returned to Chicago last week and mapped a campaign to regain his fiancee's love.

He invested in a fall outfit—shoes, suit, coat and hat—and bought a new engagement ring and a bracelet and then called the girl and arranged for a date.

She had been contacted by bonding company agents after Hurt's disappearance from the Miami American Express company office and notified police. They were waiting yesteday when the youth stepped up briskly to the girl on the street corner.

He took off his hat. "Long time no see," he began.

Then, he felt heavy hands on his shoulder and turned to face two policemen.

"I'm sorry," the girl said, her eyes brimming with tears. She turned and was gone.

Authorities declined to identify the girl, stating that she was not involved in the thefts.

Police Lt. John Murphy said that Hurt had become engaged to the girl when he was stationed in Chicago with the Navy but that before he was transferred, she had returned his ring and told him she no longer loved him.

After his discharge, Hurt took a job as a $30-a-week money order clerk in Miami and operated a newspaper and cigar stand as a sideline.

He took the cash and money orders, according to Murphy, and fled from Miami Sept. 27. He bought a car for $800, abandoned it at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., and came here to make another attempt to win the girl.

In the meantime, authorities had contacted the girl and she arranged the fateful meeting with him on instructions from police.

At the detective bureau, Hurt was searched and police found a money belt containing $3,000. Then, he directed police to his hotel room and the railroad station locker where they found the rest of the loot.

Hurt told Murphy he was sorry he had stolen the money.

"This," he told the policeman "is the sad story of one guy who fell in love."

NEWS Behind the NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

tainly, however, the Democrats have not been able to match the Republican slogan: "had enough?"

The fundamental political situation from the Republican or any other standpoint in my opinion is simply this:

The Roosevelt regime managed to perpetuate itself by an unreasonable and purely political alliance of southern Democrats, city unions and city political machines in the north and east, and even the Communists. This alliance was maintained by the genius of Mr. Roosevelt. Signs that it is cracking are unmistakable. The pressure of international and domestic events have forced open breaks wider and wider in the coalition, and it cannot be maintained much longer.

Yet the machines of the cities and unions are the best organized political pressure groups in the country. A union may fine a member for not voting. It provides automobiles, pressure and instruction to get its vote recorded 100 percent. The city machines do fairly well in this respect also. The public at large is not organized. If the vote of the middle class, the white collar worker and the average citizen is more than 60 per cent recorded, in an off-year election, the movement to get out the vote will be considered a success. Only the ballots actually cast will count.

In view of the dismal condition of the Democrats, my election prediction is this:

The Republicans will gain firm control of the house perhaps by 16 or 17 votes or more and will come close to controlling the senate, perhaps within one or two votes. If the split among the unions eventuates at the polls, the scope of the victory will be enlarged to the same extent as the split widens. In that case, the Republicans may win more than they claim.

Opinions expressed by the writer in this column are the views of the author and not necessarily those of the Circleville Herald.

Pickaway Twp. Farm

It is very seldom that you have the opportunity to purchase good farms located in Pickaway Twp. At the present time I have listed for sale 2 farms totaling approximately 201 acres with 92 acres in one tract and 109 acres in the other. Each tract of land has a complete set of buildings and they may be purchased separately or as one farm. The land is highly productive, the location, about 2 miles from Circleville, is exceptionally good. This is an unusually high grade exclusive listing. If you are interested in an extra good "home farm" close to Circleville, contact—

There Are No Greener Pastures

These are abnormal times. Conditions are the same all over. Lack of equipment resulting from reconversion and production difficulties, are now greatly handicapping us in our telephone expansion program and service improvement plans. We are doing our best with the limited amount of equipment we are receiving.
